cientific Research

Seminar Exciting research is being pursued at Taylor in the fields of biology, chemistry, physics, environmental science, and information science. Selected students in these majors are receiving valuable experience working alongside faculty members in ten independent research projects. Funded by the University in cooperation with the Lilly Foundation, the Indiana Academy of Science, and an NIH research grant, these projects are adding a broader dimension to the preparation of our students for graduate schools and careers in experimental research. On Friday afternoon, you will get a layman's glimpse into this fascinating realm of scientific study. Demonstrations by students and faculty.
